a settlement of debts and indemnities for the Brussels meeting, limiting the commission merely to the application of future control of finances in Germany.

There is a spirited controversy between Paris and London over holding the Brussels meeting. The British oppose it, while France urges it be held before Jaanuary I. Alleged intimations in British circles that France in offering to reduce the German indemnity in return for cancellation of her debt is giving up something she never would receive have evoked a French retortivat the British in opposing the Brussels conference do not want to be placed in the position of blocking a general settlement of reparation through retusal to cancel a debt which cannot be paid.

The reply virtually rejects the British proposition as announced by Sir John Lradibury and offers a substitute which deals much less leniently with Germany. Stress is laid on the necessity of some general understanding on interallied debts and the whole reparation question, and it is thought the French Government will reserve its broader plan for a settlement of debts and indemnities for the Brussels meeting, limiting the commission merely to the application of future control of finances in Germany.
